

Hey,

While trying to figure out my favorite memory of Kethan, I was talking to Jagan and he said something that stayed with me. When we were in Houston last June, a bunch of us were sitting in Kethan's room and going through YouTube to pick out some videos and the whole time we were doing this, we were talking about Kethan and our conversations and memories of him and laughing the whole time. Jagan said that, that for him was a weirdly beautiful moment and I realized that moment for me was essentially Kethan. No matter what conversations we had, whether we were discussing science, movies or politics, or he was pulling my leg or sending me the ridiculous 10 hour on-the-loop videos, he never failed to make me smile or laugh!

I read this somewhere: "I do not grieve what I do not love. Great grief is a sign of great love – and great love is a gift beyond compare". He is loved and missed!
